

Aeron's Summary of the Halkmenan Rebels' Tale

We only know of the western half of the Estoil Hills. Because Mala sits right in the middle we have little contact with the eastern rebels and refugees.

- A) A village with about 200 people hidden in a small forest at far northwestern end of the Estoil Hills. It is led by Acacoatl and his band of 20 warriors. Acacoatl styles himself Lord of Halkemenan, and Zothay. He was a noble who survived Divolic's conquest. He claims leadership of the western rebels. Well he tries to claim leadership.
- B) A small ten man rebel band lead by Tlilpoca an ex-arena fighter what you would call a gladiator. He and Acacoatl do not get along. His men are not well disciplined and known for their boisterous drinking parties.
- C) This small forest is has a ruined tower the remains of an old Halkemenan or Nomar border fort. Nobody really knows. Villagers and rebels go to him for healing, charms and sometimes advice. The forest is guarded by animated skeletons.
- D) A village with 300 people built into a bluff alongside Nopanzin Creek. The village is led by the Lady Izquitl who was a well known and respect noble in the city state of Halkmenan. Most of the rebel bands go to her for supplies including Acacoatl. She often called to adjudicate disputes. She only has a trusted man-at-arms Chatzin and five warriors at her command.
- E) Our rebel camp, led by Hual the Strong, we have ten men at our camp but after the run in with the Snakes we only have a handful left at best. Hual had some military training but was drummed out for cowardice. To be honest we are not sure how he is a coward as he is a genius at getting us organized and when it comes to fighting they don't call him the strong for nothing.
- F) A larger rebel encampment led by a brother and sister twin named Cuet, the sister, and Cual, the brother. We think they were arena fighters. They have 20 warriors under their command. They also have some personal issues with the lord in charge of Mala. Nobody knows what but they are real touchy about it.
- G) Everybody stays clear of the forest in the center Estoil Hills. It is home to the court of the Forest Folk and anybody goes in is lucky to come out again.
- H) The Quarry where the attack took place.

Mala – Lord Vanarius a High Archon of Set rules in the name of Duke Divolic. There are number of companies stationed in Mala, three companies (20 men each) the last we heard. Hanson's Band (Hanson is the brother of the Snake leader you killed) , The Fiery Swords, and the Duke's Crossbowmen.

Chugo – Sir Janius is some Tharian Horselord who is loyal to Duke Divolic. He took over from his father a couple of years back. Everybody hates him as he and his buddies just ride around doing whatever they want. Luckily he has no sense so we run rings around him. We have a pretty tight grip on Chugo and it will be one of the first places to fall when the work is given.

Abberset – Our quarrel is with Divolic and his thugs. We know that that you think we are a bunch of death cultist but we worship Hamakhis as Judge of the Dead and only do human sacrifice when an execution is called for. No different when you Ghinorians hang a man. We have a nice trading system going with the miner and even come into the town once in a while. The Count of Shodan has left us alone and we leave him alone.
